Transforming lives through the heart of health care

CNAHS Brief History

The College of Nursing and Allied Health Professions is the youngest department of the Ateneo de Manila University Foundation, Inc. It was established in 1980, seeing the increasing research and demand of health care professionals applied for and obtained the permit to operate the Bachelor of Science in Nursing Program, thus establishing the College of Nursing. Through the years, the College of Nursing has not stopped its effort to deliver quality nursing education since its first graduate in 1986. It has become a name of the university with its consistent list top notchers and the high performance in the Nurse Licensure Examination. To date, the college has not stopped its effort to improve and expand its continuing quest for excellence in providing immediate respond to the needs of the community by opening of the Bachelor of Science in Medical Technology Program in 2015 and continuously making a ride on the ever growing wave of local and global demand for health professionals answering to the complex health care demands of the 21st century.
